TIANMA SIGNATURE SINGAPOREAN DRINKS

TEH TARIK

100

The origins of Teh Tarik can be traced to Indian-Muslim immigrants in the Malay Peninsula who set up drink stalls at the entrance of rubber plantations after World War II to serve the workers there.

Teh Tarik - literally "pulled tea" is a hot milk tea beverage which can be commonly found in restaurants, and outdoor stalls. Its name is derived from the pouring process of "pulling" the drink during preparation. It is made from black tea, condensed milk or evaporated milk.

LASSI

Lassi is one of the most popular drinks in Singapore. It was brought by Indian immigrants during the British colonial time.
